INTROVERT DOODLES: AN ILLUSTRATED LOOK AT INTROVERT LIFE IN AN EXTROVERT WORLD BY MAUREEN "MARZI" WILSON PDF

"Marzi's charming and irreverent illustrations are exactly what young and old introverts need to approach their temperament with wisdom and self-affirmation." --Susan Cain, author of Quiet

Whoever said there's strength in numbers lied.

Meet Marzi. She's an introvert who often finds herself in awkward situations. Marzi used to feel strange about her introverted tendencies. Not anymore! Now she knows that there are tons of introverts out there just like her--introverts who enjoy peace and quiet, need time alone to recharge their battery, and who prefer staying in with their pet and a good book to awkward social interactions.

Just like Marzi, these introverts can often be found in libraries, at home watching Netflix, brainstorming excuses to miss your next party, or doodling cute cartoons. Being an introvert in an extrovert world isn't always easy, but it certainly is an adventure. In Introvert Doodles, follow Marzi through all of her most uncomfortable, charming, honest, and hilarious moments that everyone--introvert, extrovert, or somewhere in between--can relate to.

A book about me

By Mr. & Mrs. John

Finally someone who understands!

This is a book about me. Marzi accurately draws out the daily interactions of an introvert and those around them. My whole life I've been trying to explain my fears, joys, hesitations... what makes me relax, what makes me anxious... but not many would empathize with me. A lot of people would pick going to a party over going to the library. Not me :)

I was "weird and would eventually get out of this phase". Well I'm 30 now and I'm still an introvert. I'm happy and living a very fulfilling life that I love. But where was this book 15 years ago! You see, Marzi not only shows that there's nothing wrong with being introverted or shy, she also does it in a way that makes you laugh and realize your life is actually pretty interesting. I can relate to each page. Now when I'm with someone who just needs a little more understanding about me I want to hand them this book "here, borrow this. You'll understand" ;)

Marzi's humorous illustrations are brilliant, informative, and even therapeutic!

By John O

I discovered Maureen "Marzi" Wilson's captivating "Introvert Doodles" via social media in mid-2016. "Finally," I thought, "somebody truly understands what it's like to be me!" After learning that a collection of her fun tweets was being published, I pre-ordered the book immediately and am delighted to have it in my hands now. Although Marzi certainly isn't the first person to write about personality types which are more introverted than outgoing, she might be the first to do so in the form of comic strip-like illustrations.

But don't let her chosen medium fool you. Marzi's artful humor offers every bit as much insight and brilliant observation as a scholarly essay into what it's like being an introvert — in a charming book that's a whole lot more fun to read than any essay. And while "Introvert Doodles" is wholesome and absolutely appropriate for readers of any age (after all, what child doesn't like to page through colorful, humorous drawings), my guess is that the first audience Marzi had in mind are adult introverts who, whether they've been trying to navigate our loud and extroverted world for 25 years or 75 years, have experienced countless times the many awkward situations she aptly illustrates.

The humor found within "Introvert Doodles" is potentially both informative and therapeutic. How? Three ways to use Marzi's book immediately come to mind:

1. Every introvert should have this as a coffee table book — THE coffee table book!
2. Fellow introverts, want to provide a friend or loved one (especially those who are naturally extroverted) a special insight into what it's like being you? Buy a copy of "Introvert Doodles," mark the pages which remind you of yourself (or, even better, of situations you shared with that friend or family member), and then give the book as a gift. Don't forget to write a personal message inside the front cover.
3. Think you've spotted someone (friend, relative, acquaintance, coworker, or even a love interest) who you think might be an introvert who isn't yet comfortable in his/her own skin? Gift a copy of Marzi's book as a conversation starter. Inside the cover, I suggest you write a message something like "Each of us is unique, special, and worthy. We are all absolutely fine, just the way we are."

Because those are exactly the warm feelings that Marzi gives to me every time I recognize myself in the pages of "Introvert Doodles." Thanks, Marzi!

If I could pay someone to illustrate my story...

By Sam

This would be it.

This book is so lovely; it was tremendously exciting to receive it in the mail! I'm a 32 year old military veteran, single mother, and healer who has experienced the world as a self proclaimed "extroverted introvert". In most of my lines of work, I've had to be "on" in a big way, all the time. Often I've felt embarrassed at how drained I've felt despite my outwards illusionary projections of myself for others, at how physically, mentally and emotionally challenging it can be for me to stay in socially awkward situations. As I've aged, I've learned to embrace who I am and happily own my awkwardness, and to appreciate those who understand why I'm not always available and need to recharge without limits or expectation.

So reading this book and looking through each illustration brings a huge smile to my face, because I feel as though I'm reading about myself. I feel understood and celebrated! Thank you, Marzi; this book is truly a gift. ❤️?
