(201) RAYMOND DEPARDON PDF

"In 1977, I met Franco Basaglia, director of the manicomio [lunatic asylum] at the hospital in Trieste, who was also the leader of an alternative psychiatric movement. Taking advantage of the chaotic political situation in Italy at the time, he started to close several psychiatric hospitals with a group of doctors, and had 'Law 180' passed in 1978, which resulted in the definitive closure of the asylums. Franco encouraged me to take photographs of this reality, 'If not, they will not believe us,' he told me. With more than a hundred thousand people interned in psychiatric asylums all over Italy, the situation was indeed dramatic. He also introduced me to directors of other asylums in Venice, Naples, Arezzo and Turin. For four years, until the closure of the hospital on the island of San Clemente very close to Venice, I photographed these places of pain to preserve them in memory and to pay tribute to Franco Basaglia--who died from a sudden illness in 1980. My film about San Clemente came out in 1982, but it's only now thirty years later--after a long pause--that I have finally edited and designed the photographic work that was begun all those years ago." -- Raymond Depardon

Excellent coverage in a few Italian insane asylums

By Daniel D. Teoli Jr.

You probably couldn't do this book nowadays, in the US anyway, with all the privacy laws. Excellent coverage in a few Italian insane asylums. I'm glad Depardon archived it. More importantly I'm thankful that the people running the asylums had the foresight to know the importance of documenting this material. The printing is good. The book I received had a damaged cover with a bubble in it. But that has no effect on the great documentary photography inside. Depardon included his recount of the project from start to finish.

get a hardcover edition instead

By Ordine

great photos by Depardon, but for your own's sake get a hardcover version. The soft one is ugly and tones down the whole value of it.
