My Favorite Cookbook of All Time Now

By Edward F. Gibney

After watching the BBC show that was the companion to this cookbook, I HAD to get it and give these recipes a try. I'm a good home cook (have traveled to 50 countries, always look for the best food experiences, can replicate most things at home, hardly use recipes anymore, can whip up a dinner party for 10 people with no drama) and I've tried 11 recipes out of here so far and found them all to be excellent. From impressive mains like slow roasted lamb over potatoes, honey roasted bacon joint, or pollock baked with chickpeas and chorizo, to breakfast treats like a smoked fish and creme omelette or sweetcorn pancakes, to the celeriac and bramley apple soup, to perfect sides like cheese scones, soda bread, or glazed carrots, to a lush spiced orange cake for dessert...this cookbook has given me those WOW moments every time I take a bite. The directions and portions have all been spot on too. I've identified 28 other recipes I want to try (really rare! I usually only cook 5 or 6 dishes from a cookbook) and I can hardly wait to get through them. This will change my eating forever.
